CHICAGO WOLVES HOMETOWN HERO PROGRAM

By
Larry Nazimek

You have undoubtedly attended (or at least watched on TV) a sports event where a military member, veteran, or first responder was recognized, and you wondered how that person was selected. Who did he know in order to get recognized? As one who was selected for the Wolves April 18, 2015, game, I can tell you.

The Chicago Wolves have a "Hometown Hero" program, presented by Patriot Pavement Maintenance, and it's a simple matter of having someone nominate you. They would first go to the team's website, chicagowolves.com and click on the COMMUNITY tab. You will immediately notice that the Wolves are an organization that puts a great deal of emphasis on community relations and charitable efforts. In the CHARITIES column, you will see HOMETOWN HERO, the link to the program's page, where you will see information on the program and a nomination form.

If selected, you will be able to get free tickets for your friends and relatives.

The opening ceremonies begin with video clips on the jumbotron, with pyrotechnics, flares, and flame throwers on the ice, followed by team mascot Skates and the introduction of the Wolves' players. The Hero is then recognized as he walks from the penalty box area out on the ice on a red carpet. Senior Exec. VP Wayne Messmer then sings our National Anthem. You need not worry about photos, as their photographer takes them, and they are emailed to you.

The Wolves are very pro-military, starting with Chairman of the Board/Governor Don Levin, a Marine Veteran. They have had many Military Appreciation Nights, where special team jerseys were designed to honor our armed forces, which were later put up for silent auction.

If you think that hockey tickets are only for investment bankers and those who can write off their tickets as entertainment expenses for tax purposes, you haven't checked out the Wolves. Go to a game and
